It is one thing to recognize that people have hard lives, often through no fault of their own. It's different entirely to treat them like children with no agency. Oliver's grandfather reminds me of my Mamaw.

      Importantly, uncertainty doesn't mean we should be doing nothing. I'm supportive of various efforts to encourage "social distancing," though I do worry that they're not politically tenable for more than a few weeks. Eventually, people will get really pissed.

      Referencing it is fine! Some very smart people produced it. But it is a model, and we should ask ourselves how well its assumptions fit the evolving data.

I've been reading a lot of the contrarian (primarily from fellow righties) COVID19 opinions, and I wanted to work through them in good faith. I find most of them pretty unpersuasive. As they say, THREAD:

Obvious caveat: I am hardly an expert. I care about this stuff for its own sake and also because in my day job I manage (mostly) other people's money, and many of them have asked me about my views on the crisis as it's evolved. So here goes:

To state the obvious, the two big unknowns are 1) mortality rate (and related y, hospitalization rate) and 2) how easily it spreads. The argument of the piece above is that the data we have from other countries points in such wildly divergent directions that we just don't know

This, from @ph!43, is one of the smartest things I've read about coronavirus. Warning, it will satisfy neither the "it's just the flu" crowd nor the "Imperial College model is Gospel" crowd:

To organize, I'll start by summarizing the big arguments, and then I'll walk through each of them one by one, though many of these claims are related to one another.

A brief history of the post war conservative movement is that donors funded a bunch of institutions that persuaded people to understand conservatism in these terms. And the end result was the rise of China, the decimation of American families, and a lot of tax cuts for the rich.

The people and institutions who advocated free trade and lower taxes - many of whom we both know--thought those policies did further common good, that they would make America as a whole more prosperous and free. Protectionists aren't the only people who care about the common good.

Direct onally, I agree that policymakers have largely failed to reckon with the secondary consequences of the pandemic and the response to it. Best illustration is Biden's "I would shut it down, I would listen to the scientists" comment about a potential resurgence Epidemiologists have expertise in disease spread (though as we saw with their response to the protests, even that can get politicized), but they have no special ability to weigh the social, economic, and other costs. We can't outsource all cost-benefit calculus to scientists.

One quibble I continue to think we overstate the economic costs of a lot of these policies (and their benefits, too). A lot of the response to the pandemic is informal and independent of the policies in place. It's not like Sweden (no lockdown) has avoided economic pain

(To their credit, the authors anticipate and address this point. But I continue to think that social trust, demographics, and fear of the virus is driving this as much as any particular policy.)

It's useful to distinguish libertarian attitudes ("folk libertarianism") from think tank policy agendas. Trump ran explicitly against 1) free trade, 2) immigration dovishness; and 3) entitlement reform. Interestingly, all issues that unite neocon and libertarian policy shops.

Many people who have conventional and boring ideas also possess a sense of rebelliousness about their worldview. I have plenty of conventional views. But if Jeff Bezos, the president of Harvard, and every popular musician believes something, it doesn't take courage to agree.

I would share her address if not for obvious privacy concerns. But I honestly can't believe how long it is. Every time I write her a letter, it's 50 percent writing, 25 percent writing the address, and 25 percent whining about writing the address.

A brief history of the post war conservative movement is that donors funded a bunch of institutions that persuaded people to understand conservatism in these terms. And the end result was the rise of China, the decimation of American families, and a lot of tax cuts for the rich.

Is there a credible COVID theory that explains both Belgium and Sweden right now? Pretty frustrating how little we know about this thing after nearly a year.

Neither one is doing particularly much to slow the spread right now, so it's spreading. The uptick is coming faster in Belgium because the people are generally less careful, since they had a much longer "calm" period over the past few months.

Peop e giv ng population density answers are doing the calcu at on wrong The denominator isn't the landmass of Sweden because most of the population is in a few cities. A ternative though is avg household size Many Swedes live alone & transmiss on w/ n household s very common

The household size thing seems to be really important. I understand (and obviously do it myself) the desire to extrapolate from Sweden, but it's probably of limited utility.

A brief history of the post war conservative movement is that donors funded a bunch of institutions that persuaded people to understand conservatism in these terms. And the end result was the rise of China, the decimation of American families, and a lot of tax cuts for the rich.

Uninvited, and I emailed you about this, but I do think one of the things that's going on is that globalization has created similar economic (and cultural) pressures on both the owner of the roofing company (or the local manufacturer) and the worker

This cultural leveling is observably true, in my experience, but probably doesn't hold for the CEO who is thriving after (and because) they took advantage of massive labor arbitrage opportunities overseas, and their workers. Lordstown probably has a different dynamic from Altoona

The Church had a similar agreement in Po and after the war when they were a Soviet satellite nation. It did not prevent Pope St. John Paul the Great from rising through the ranks.
So, yes, the agreement with China can work. It can also fail miserably. It is risky.

Like idk what to tell you, fertility has been "below replacement" for over 30 years (except 2006-2007) but we've never had negative population growth. We've never even had negative natural increase (births minus deaths, no consideration of migration)

1.77 births per woman (2017)

Proof that below-replacement fertility is fake. Where can I get my Nobel Prize in Demography?

Time	Generation 1	Generation 2	Generation 3	Generation 4	Generation 5	Population & Fertility
0	100 (old)	200 (fertile)	400 (children)			Population = 700 Fertility Rate = 4
1	dead	200 (old)	400 (fertile)	360 (children)		Population 960 Fertility Rate 1.8 Natural increase = 280
2	dead	dead	400 (old)	360 (fertile)	288 (children)	Population 1048 Fertility Rate 1.6 Natural increase = 88

2 49

Philippe Lemoine @ph43 · 2 Std
Oh no! It turns out that below-replacement fertility is not fake after all. There goes my Nobel Prize

Time	Generation 1	Generation 2	Generation 3	Generation 4	Generation 5	Generation 6	Population & Fertility
0	100 (old)	200 (fertile)	400 (children)				Population = 700 Fertility Rate = 4
1	dead	200 (old)	400 (fertile)	360 (children)			Population 960 Fertility Rate 1.8 Natural increase = 280
2	dead	dead	400 (old)	360 (fertile)	288 (children)		Population 1048 Fertility Rate 1.6 Natural increase = 88
3	dead	dead	dead	360 (old)	288 (fertile)	201 (children)	Population 849 Fertility Rate: 1.5 Natural increase = -39

4 2 55

Philippe Lemoine @ph43 · 1 Std
By the way, just looking at natural increase doesn't totally remove the effect of immigration, since births include natural-born descendants of immigrants and therefore natural increase would have been lower had it not been for past immigration

Philippe Lemoine @ph43 · 1 Std
But the point is that, with population momentum, you don't even need immigration for the population to increase for a while with below-replacement fertility. It's just that the age structure changes, i.e. the population gets older

3 28

Philippe Lemoine @ph43 · 1 Std
Moreover, sooner or later, below-replacement fertility catches up with you and the population starts going down. Clearly, only a white nationalist could worry about any of that, so by all means let's just cancel @JDVance1 for talking about below-replacement fertility

Like a lot of people on here, I'm watching this obsessively. Seems like the most important question is whether Florida is an outlier in terms of polling bias--if it's not, Trump is likely to actually pull this out.

Between 2016, 2018, and 2020, it's actually surprising how consistently the polls have missed Florida, and in the same direction. It's not like they're all over the place!

There is a weird horseshoe theory of monetary policy that I've heard privately discussed in populist circles—basically that modified goldbuggery is similar to MMT. Not sure I even understand the claim but I'd definitely read more about it.

My concern is as no one seems to want to build homes anymore that we are just seeing a blow out in housing prices even allowing for a Covid correction One of the major barriers to younger people getting married is that they will never be able to afford their own home

Shelton has a long and checkered past. One take is that her unorthodox views from the past could lead to different unorthodox views now.

If I had to guess, I'd say she is still a staunch zombie Reaganite. H/E I'm interested in seeing if her shift sticks if she isn't confirmed

Dimitri I barely understand the claim here, so can't evaluate it. But part of it is that if you're concerned about, say, financialization, you'll be attracted to some heterodox views about monetary economics. And there are some interesting overlaps between the unorthodox schools

I don't think we're properly weighting costs to children of some pandemic strategies. Last week my wife had the kids out buying shoes. A woman & her preschool-aged daughter walked in. She said it was the first time the girl had seen other children in many months. This is madness.

Oh, but it's a catechesis in sacrifice and solidarity, one might say. Maybe we can say that about masking (within reason) or giving up some field trips, but denying children the irreplaceable joy of other children—fellow human beings—is something different

Brandon McGinley @brandonmcg · 1 Std.
It's a catechesis in fear, a catechesis in catastrophizing. It teaches children that the goodness of other people and indeed of the whole world is contingent on risk, and that risk minimization is worth any price. It teaches that the first principle of the world is danger

Thank you Hannah-Kate. I appreciate the kind words and wish you the best. To clarify for your friends: I think of culture as the set of social cues that influence behavior. There is undoubtedly an economic component to that, but it's more complicated. My two cents at least!

I've seen "Hillbilly Elegy." Amy Adams and Glenn Close are both terrific. The movie is a well-told family drama. The reason the critics are crapping all over it is simple: the book was treated as humanizing "Trump supporters," and is now a Bad Book™. So the movie is also Bad™.

I'm glad the film makes you feel closer to your family. I really am. But Vance really "punched down" in his book. Instead of looking upon folks with empathy, he blamed them alone for their poverty and drug abuse. I approached the book objectively. I was infuriated by the end.

It wasn't as good as the book, but it's clear that your life experience is something that doesn't enter into the worldview of many of the critics Also the case that the Appalachian community is still regarded by many as a den of "deplorables", hence unworthy of sympathy

BTW W, don t think the film (or book) represented a simplistic paean of praise to conservative ideas. Personal responsibility IS important, but the scenes documenting your mother's challenges powerfully illustrated profound structural failings in the provision of US healthcare

Attended virtual conference titled "Don't Cry For US, JD Vance," very good readings, stories, but I asked why attack @JDVance1 ? His "Hillbilly Elegy" and @RealRonHoward movie tell a lot of truths

A. "We want to show Appalachian culture is alive and well, in no need of elegy"

What did you think Dan? Some of this undoubtedly turns on the different definition I use for “elegy.” But I’m glad conversations are happening and I hope people continue to engage.

Hey JD had my parents watch the movie with me. I LOVE the book Mom cried nearly the whole way through it, so relatable to anyone that has grown up in the Tri-State. Also I'm related to the Hatfields too. Great job!

about the HILLBILLY ELEGY movie's reception

60 108 661

Silas Chamberlin @SilasChamberlin · 58m

I enjoyed the book. I've recommended it to others. I've also seen legitimate criticism of it from people with different experiences growing up in the region.

This review is just ignorant and inflammatory - and does not do credit to your work or the discussions it has fostered

J.D. Vance @DVance1 54m

Well I know and like Glenn, so I don't agree. There are undoubtedly legitimate critiques and I try to engage with them. But there is a category of criticism out there that's just dismissive, and seems almost offended the book was written (or the movie made) at all

> "Muterspaw was, for decades, a pillar of the community in Middletown—rising from a junior officer on the Middletown Police force to Chief during the height of the opioid epidemic. And for that entire time, he kept this incredible diary, chronicling the highs and lows and hilarious moments of community policing. In these pages, you gain an appreciation for the man. Has anyone written a good essay about the whole "I believe in science/trust the scientists" phenomenon which is more a lifestyle brand than an actual belief in the scientific method which is a process, not a set of facts handed down like the Bible?

Like the way science actually operates, you're constantly trying to disprove the things we think we know. It's not like there's an authority and you listen to them because they've been handed religious truth.

What do you think this means, though? One plausible explanation is that there is a fatherhood penalty and the higher ASVAB cohort adjusts behavior accordingly/has a different utility function (on average)

I'm probably the worst person to substantively respond to your actual question. I've found generally that the people who are most offended tend to ascribe views to me I don't actually have, but it comes with the territory and I'm at least glad most people are engaging positively.

I have the book on order after watching the movie. Loved the movie WV gal here whose family was intact but with lots of obstacles to overcome to "get there." I sort of likened your story to Jeannette Walls' Glass Castles. Glad your attitude about the naysayers is so positive

Watching Survivor Season 1 on Hulu and I'm amazed at how different the show has become. The personalities of the contestants were gigantic and their strategy was terrible. One guy votes purely on alphabetical order

Okay folks, I don't understand folks saying don't read #HillbillyElegy because they don't agree with it or some of @JDVance1's conclusions. That just doesn't make sense to me, shouldn't we be reading things that we don't necessarily agree with to understand others?

And the brazen crudeness of the lie clearly reveals a pattern we're seeing a lot lately: allegations of "hate" are usually deployed as a smokescreen to protect insiders.

And then when it happens . you blame the Left.

It's tiresome. Our corporate overlords are a direct result of GOP policies since the Reagan era...policies you trumpeted in your book.

This young writer has it right, I think. The growth in homicide in US cities, 2020 over 2019, has been stunning, has mostly claimed black lives, and has gone completely unremarked in progressive media, which is shameful.

Seeing reports the Biden administration is going to push for amnesty. Here's Bernie Sanders in 2015 arguing that global corporations use excess immigration to steal wages from the working and middle class.

The Biden admin is considering domestic travel restrictions while effectively inviting millions to come here in the middle of a global pandemic. Even left wing governments (like New Zealand) have closed the border. What a joke.

Also what about the service sector workers (many of whom are first gen immigrants!) who've been totally slammed by COVID restrictions. Do they really need massive wage competition right now? This plan solves no actual problem the country faces.

The Texas power/water outage story is just depressing. We're the richest country in the world and one of our biggest states has gone days with major infrastructure gaps. Sometimes feels like we're becoming a country where nothing works like it's supposed to.

It should be possible "for the average person to get married, buy a house, have a few kids, and send them to school on a single wage. That's it. If you can do that, you win."

One way of making the military less woke would he to eliminate the university degree requirement from the officer corps. It's dumb to make people get a BA before becoming officers anyway.

From Vox (not exactly a conservative publication):

“Though the White House has declined so far to call it a ‘crisis,’ the situation is increasingly dire”

A predictable consequence of Biden policy that is basically an invitation to illegal immigrants.

"Biden promised us!" wailed another woman.

Many of the migrants said they had spent their life savings and gone into debt to pay coyotes — human smugglers — who had falsely promised them that the border was open after President Biden's election.

The choice to have a porous border is a choice. Changing that would require more enforcement and more willingness to turn people away. It may mean fewer migrants making a dangerous journey, yes, but it would also mean less misery for Americans. That makes it worthwhile.

Even when I was a kid, the left's argument on race was "America is good and needs to live up to it principles." Amazing how quickly that shifted to "America is fundamentally evil."

I've seen this lie repeated in any number of media outlets, from local Louisville and Cincinnati papers to national outlets like the Washington Post. But let me just say again: the idea that I was forced out of Appharvest because of some tweets is obviously untrue. It is a lie

Appharvest is an agricultural technology company in Kentucky. I got involved four years ago, and have been a supporter and investor of the company ever since. I've seen it morph from an idea into a publicly traded company with the potential to transform our food system

@DVance1

I love this company, the people involved, and the founder, who has become a dear friend. But my ability to be useful now that it's a public company is limited, I'm thinking about a political run, and whatever I do politically, I hate the insane reigning political orthodoxy...

So last month, I started talking with other members of the board about stepping down. The basic thinking was: I'm going to keep speaking my mind, and I'd rather do that unconstrained by the demands of a public board. And I thought the company would be better off too

J.D. Vance @DVance1 · 1 Min

Now, do I think this is unfair? Yes. Do I think progressive board members at public companies are worried about their viewpoints affecting their companies? Obviously not, and the last few weeks have shown everyone: corporate America is totally in the tank for the left

At this very moment there are companies (big and small) paying good wages to American workers, investing in their communities, and making it easier for American families. Cut their taxes. No more subsidies to the anti American business class

Tucker Carlson is the only powerful figure who consistently challenges elite dogma—on both cultural and economic questions. That is why they try to destroy him. Don't fall for it this time, or any other.

Tucker Carlson is the only powerful figure who consistently challenges elite dogma—on both cultural and economic questions. That is why they try to destroy him. Don't fall for it this time, or any other.

Tucker Carlson is the only powerful figure who consistently challenges elite dogma on both cultural and economic questions. That is why they try to destroy him. Don't fall for it this time, or any other.

      Tucker is a smart and capable reporter/analyst. His is often the only voice on cable news bringing attention to important cultural issues. It's a shame that he feels compelled to overdramatize, exaggerate, and sensationalize. His 'performance' too often borders on clownish.

      TV is for people who like entertainment and have short attention spans. He caters to his audience, which is the largest on tv btw. He, like intelligent people, get their information from many sources, reading, other people, direct sources, etc. just my thoughts.

      Tucker is a smart and capable reporter/analyst. His is often the only voice on cable news bringing attention to important cultural issues. It's a shame that he feels compelled to overdramatize, exaggerate, and sensationalize. His 'performance' too often borders on clownish.

Men are more than 3 times likely to be struck by lightning than women. Would you say lightning strikes for either group are routine?

To make this more explicit, how "routine" something is depends on absolute numbers not relative comparison.

Wokeness has made you dumb, Will.

I think what JD is getting at is that conditioning the probability of a deadly police shooting on race and nothing else is insufficient for inferring whether race is causal. Different age demographics are a big confounder, as just one example. Has anyone done an apples-to-apples comparison?

In U.S., most common age for whites is much older than for minorities

The establishment critique of universal daycare is that it spends too much money.

The better critique is that it's terrible for children, and that a healthy society should make it easier for parents to care for kids. Spend money on parents, not corporate daycare.

JD Vance is not opposed to child care tout court. But he is opposed to Biden's plans to dramatically expand govt-funded child care. @JDVance1 explains why in @WSJopinion w/ Jenet Erickson. His opposition is partly about its likely effect on kids:

wsj.com/articles/biden ...

Moreover, the avai.ab.e empirical data contradict Ms. Oster's argument. In 1997 the provincial government of Quebec began offering cluld care for 5 Canadian dollars a day to al. families, regardless of .ncome. Almost two decades later, economists M.chael Baker, Kevin Milligan and Jonathan Gruber found that children from two-parent families who participated showed significant increases in anxiety, aggression and hyperactivity. Those effects persisted—and even grew—as they reac.ed young adulthood. Se.f-reported health and life satisfaction decreased significantly. Boys who partic.pated were more .ikely to commit crimes. It was, to put it bluntly, a disaster for Quebec's children.

Is mimesis rational? I'm very interested in your argument here and maybe even agree. But there seems to be something extremely ritualistic and social about wokeness.

and it makes our analysis of it worse when we dismiss it as such rather than asking what rational incentives drive its adoption.

I think when all the elites start doing something in sync, we do ourselves a disservice if we don't look for the secret rational motives

I do think it's possible for a cascade of rational actions to produce something extremely ritualistic, social, and perhaps even religious

(And yes, mimesis can be very rational [uio.no/studier/emner/...])

for example, the fact that Aaron and I are engaged in a herd behavior of posting the same paper is caused by the underlying rational mechanism that we both read and discussed it recently

This is a longer conversation about definitions, but the herd behavior I see at the root of wokeness seems irrational. What's most religious about wokeness to me is the sacramental stuff

The oversight board is a mix of creepy, laughably stupid, and corrupt. I can't tell if the board itself or the rapture with which legal elites greet this ridiculous PR exercise is more cringe.

The establishment critique of universal daycare is that it spends too much money.

The better critique is that it's terrible for children, and that a healthy society should make it easier for parents to care for kids. Spend money on parents, not corporate daycare.

Here’s a story about disabled farmer Adam Faust, one of the many victims of the Biden administration’s racism. The idea that he’s “already had his pie” is preposterous to anyone whose brain hasn’t been taken over by hate.

      To Republicans, "critical race theory" is an all purpose boogeyman that suggests our academic institutions are indoctrinating students to hate white people. This fear is weaponized to intimidate educators away from pursuing a curriculum where racism is acknowledged in any way.

Thread: I can't drink anymore. When I do, the ghosts show up. They put their arm on my shoulder, look at me, body parts missing, faces half blown off. They smile with what is left of their smile. They look at me with wisdom I can't fathom and hold me with love I can't understand.

      I just can't face them. How do I look upon a man with honest eyes, knowing I'm here breathing, laughing, complaining and he's lying dead beneath my... us. I can't have that tough conversation with any of them. The one where I tell them I miss them. Where I say I'm sorry and they

      I see visions of hell and feel resentment for heaven. I see spoiled children laughing around me, the lucky ones who haven't seen behind those curtains, the many. I hate them for their ignorance, I hate I didn't die when I should've to keep them that way. So I don't drink.

We do not need police "reform" we need harsher penalties and repercussions for criminals.

We are facing a real epidemic, one of crime, it is being completely ignored by our political elites.

Check out a clip from @ohyeahitsjulio's new show.

   A 5 9 year old is "less happy" with after school care esp when taken home later in day, yet there's no empirical proof it scars the child or prevents them from living a rewarding life. Good luck though.

   I'm done responding to the Vance's/Hawley "Christian" conservative agenda in Biden's amazing AMERICAN rescue plan. There are many options afforded in Biden's plan for challenging childcare costs The wealthy will pay for this plan which Vance is probably upset about. (I.E. Thiel)

I heard from so many clearly well adjusted liberals in response to the universal daycare debate that I thought I'd weigh in with a longer response.

Just idiotic. “Remain in Mexico” was one of the smartest immigration policies of the last 30 years. A president who cares about his own people dying of fentanyl overdoses doesn’t do this.

One of the best arguments for immigration restriction is that we're clearly unable to take care of the people already here. Why let in a large number of desperate newcomers when many of our biggest cities look like this?

Bowman's congressional district has a median income much higher than Manchin's entire state. His views on HR1 are the same as nearly every powerful corporate leader in this country. The gaslighting from the Left on who really serves corporate America's interests is insufferable.

The participation of city planners, councils, "smart growth" consultants, etc., etc., in these speculation schemes should be investigated, and people should be prosecuted where indicated

This is financial fraud

It's hard. We definitely need to take a run at government actuaries but this isn't merely housing related. Black box "algorithms" and sweetheart contracting is a huge subsidy of many industries. Housing insurance is one

Lot of ideas out there for how to directly help parents instead of giving them only one option. This is a good one:

According to this chart, the majority of parents with 4 year degrees prefer one parent watching the kids at home, as opposed to daycare. Roughly similar numbers as those without a 4 year degree

Further context: the egg was about 5 yards from the nest. Other than the single rogue egg nothing seems amiss. Given where the nest is it's unlikely to have dropped out of the nest and gotten that far away.

Brett Kavanaugh absolutely nails it in his takedown of the NCAA and it's abusive system of student employment: "The NCAA is not above the law."

> To be sure, the NCAA and its member colleges maintain important traditions that have become part of the fabric of America—game days in Tuscaloosa and South Bend; the packed gyms in Storrs and Durham; the women's and men's lacrosse championships on Memorial Day weekend; track and field meets in Eugene; the spring softball and baseball World Series in Oklahoma City and Omaha; the list goes on. But those traditions alone cannot justify the NCAA's decision to build a massive money-raising enterprise on the backs of student athletes who are not fairly compensated. Nowhere else in America can businesses get away with agreeing not to pay their workers a fair market rate on the theory that their product is defined by not paying their workers a fair market rate. And under ordinary principles of antitrust law, it is not evident why college sports should be any different. The NCAA is not above the law.

The dumbest argument you hear is that the spike in crime is because of guns. Oh really? Was there an explosion of firearm ownership over the last two years, or did maybe something else happen?

The other garbage talking point is that "defund the police" hasn't led to substantial funding restrictions. See below for dishonest framing from ABC. But the point is that cops are terrified to do their jobs, which makes our cities unsafe.

One of my personal heroes @JDVance1 has announced he is running for U.S. Senate.

Please pray for him, and join me in supporting him at jdvance.com

Every little bit counts. #JDforOhio

Announcing his run for Senate @JDVance1 went after Big Tech saying, “We’re gonna go after them; we’re going to break up their monopolies, we’re going to make it illegal for them to steal your data & then sell it back to you.”

      It seems to me that threatening retaliation via governmental levers will only make large corps get even more invested in controlling the political environment. Boycotts, private disinvestment, activist investing are far better responses.

      This is the inherent contradiction within political liberalism it gives protections to those attempting to overthrow the political order. We need more conservatives like Burnham who understood this and fewer Vichy conservatives like French.

Vítejte doma!

Na této časové ose se budete pohybovat nejčastěji. Budou se na ní objevovat aktuální zprávy o tom, co vás zajímá.

Tweety vám nefungují?

Přejeďte kurzorem přes profilový obrázek, klikněte na tlačítko Sledování a přestaňte daný účet sledovat.

Řekněte hodně, třeba i beze slov

Když uvidíte Tweet, který se vám líbí, klepněte na symbol srdce a dejte tak osobě, která Tweet napsala vědět, že to cítíte stejně.

Dejte o tom vědět dál

Nejrychlejším způsobem, jak sdílet něčí Tweet se svými sledujícími, je příspěvek retweetnout. Klepnutím na ikonu příspěvek okamžitě odešlete.

Připojit se ke konverzaci

Podělte se o své myšlenky k Tweetu prostřednictvím odpovědi na něj. Najděte téma, které vás zajímá, a pusťte se do toho.

Zjistěte, o čem se právě mluví

Získejte okamžitý přehled, o čem lidé právě mluví.

Vídejte více toho, co se vám líbí

Sledujte více účtů a mějte okamžitý přehled o tématech, která vás zajímají.

Zjistěte, co se děje

Mějte na očích nejnovější konverzace o jakémkoli tématu.

Nikdy nepropásněte žádný okamžik

Mějte okamžitý a průběžný přehled o těch nejlepších příbězích tak, jak se odehrávají.

What I find so enraging about the Joint Chiefs's pandering on progress ve wokeness is that they know damn we the geography and politics of who dies in American wars. The conservat ve Americans you trash are disproportionately bleeding for this country.

I personally would like American generals to read less about “white rage” (whatever that is) and more about “not losing wars.”

What I find so enraging about the Joint Chiefs's pandering on progressive wokeness is that they know damn well the geography and politics of who dies in American wars. The conservative Americans you trash are disproportionately bleeding for this country.

There's a very good reason why leftists and libertarians seek to smear @JDVance1: he's a smart, affable, populist, conservative who can win elections, and defend ordinary Americans against the destructive ethos of cultural and market power arrayed against them.

JD Vance accused Google last night of getting in bed with the Chinese Communist Party.

Google denied it.

JD just responded with the evidence: "[Google's] statement suggests that they think we're all idiots and can't read for ourselves." #OHSen

> The anger and vitriol behind some of the attacks on Vance belie the real motivation for them. Vance calls out big corporations for hollowing out U.S. manufacturing, sending jobs overseas, and making themselves and their educated hangers-on — the lawyers, financial mavens and others — rich in the process. Perhaps his critics don't like that he says what most Americans of all ideologies think: that the powerful have moral and social obligations to other Americans that transcend the pure pursuit of profit. The nerve of the guy!

I care about the Cubans fighting for their rights against a brutal regime.

I care much more about Americans being denied their rights, especially political prisoners sitting in Washington DC jails right now.

Serious question: I have to go to New York soon and I'm trying to figure out where to stay. I have heard it's disgusting and violent there. But is it like Walking Dead Season 1 or Season 4?

Serious question: I have to go to New York soon and I'm trying to figure out where to stay. I have heard it's disgusting and violent there. But is it like Walking Dead Season 1 or Season 4?

Was optimistic Biden wouldn't be totally weak on China. Turns out that was wrong.

It's also hilarious for this administration to be complaining about consumer prices.

JD VANCE ISSUES STATEMENT AHEAD OF JOE BIDEN'S CINCINNATI VISIT

CINCINNATI – JD Vance, a candidate running for U.S. Senate in Ohio, today issued the following statement as Joe Biden plans to visit Cincinnati tomorrow.

"Joe Biden often talks about bi-partisan solutions for America, but when push-comes-to-shove, the needs of working-class Ohioans always seem to take a backseat to the desires of out-of-touch leftwing elites. With inflation sky-high, Middle-class Americans are struggling to afford groceries, gas, and everyday items that they need to support themselves and their families. Instead of focusing on real problems that Ohioans face, Democrats are busy playing politics with a so-called "infrastructure" bill that has more to do with funding the radical left's pet projects, than fixing our roads and bridges.

"Maybe Joe Biden should look from his CNN perch tomorrow to gaze over at the crippling Brent Spence Bridge that carries over 160,000 vehicles daily to and from Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky, while its foundation crumbles every second the Democrats don't do something about it. As Ohio's next US Senator, I will give working-class Ohioans a voice in DC, because clearly they have been forgotten by Biden and the Democrat Party."

"Coming for our guns" is old school Con talk. @JDVance1 should talk how Biden is coming for everyone's selfie-stick. A 38 year old with no criminal record and not even points on his driver's license was sentenced to 8 months prison for trespassing and taking selfies on Jan 6

JD Vance Issues Statement Opposing Portman-Warner-Sinema Cryptocurrency Amendment

CINCINNATI – JD Vance, a candidate running for U.S. Senate in Ohio, today issued the following statement opposing the Biden endorsed Portman-Warner-Sinema amendment regulating cryptocurrencies in the infrastructure bill.

"The Biden endorsed, Portman-Warner-Sinema amendment being proposed in the infrastructure bill to regulate cryptocurrencies picks Big Tech as the winners, and Ohioans are the losers. Not only would this bill lead to mass surveillance of those in the cryptocurrency community, experts in the field warn that it could amount to a backdoor ban of Bitcoin and other popular cryptocurrencies.

Our tech sector used to be defined by innovative upstarts and is now dominated by boring monopolists. They focus less on tech development and more on corporate buzzwords like 'diversity, equity and inclusion.' The crypto community has stood in stark contrast to this shift. It is one of the few sectors of our economy where conservatives and other free thinkers can operate without pressure from the social justice mob. This amendment threatens that community, which makes it an assault on the idea that our economy should be about making things instead of enforcing progressive dogma.

I urge every Senator to reject this disastrous amendment and to instead support the Wyden-Toomey-Lummis Amendment in its place."

      This is because of the low interest rates we've had for 15 years. This has nothing to do with immigration. You might also notice that very few of the homeless are immigrants.

One of the best arguments for immigration restriction is that we're clearly unable to take care of the people already here. Why let in a large number of desperate newcomers when many of our biggest cities look like this?

      This is because of the low interest rates we've had for 15 years. This has nothing to do with immigration. You might also notice that very few of the homeless are immigrants.
